debris, was the lower part of a seated statuette of:

This is a seated statuette similar in material, attitude, style etc to the frag. of Bek-en-wer. H. 32 cm

- ② Bldg. 504, Trench II. At NW corner  cut a rectangular hole down through 160 cm of debris. Still going down in red sand (damp) apparently natural debris.

- ③ Bldg 500, Trench A. Have cleared away layer under "upper floor" up to foundation of pylon. This is a single layer of large stones.  And shows that the "upper floor" was the floor of that pylon. The statues were under this floor.

- ④ Continued clearing well in first court of the Taharka Temple at Meir, Hard damp debris, - cont. frag. alab., vessels and frag. granite.
