[DRAWING]

It is yet uncertain whether the hard packed red sand is part of the pyr. filling or merely washed down from above.

(3) Pyramid XVI is the western of the two "pyramides ruines" shown by Cailliaud on Pl. XLIX (map). It was a low mound of drift sand and frags of red sandstone. The whole was cleared, showing the lower part of the retaining wall of the core of a small pyramid. (⁵x meters). Height ca. 100m. On the south or towards the river was a wall of burnt brick, apparently remains of a chapel. On this same side an incline with
